The following is a summary of the testimony of Senator James Eastland, given before the Subcommittee on Labor and Human Resources of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, U. S. Senate, on October 1, 1964. The testimony was given in response to a request for information regarding the activities of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and its leader, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., in connection with the civil rights movement. Senator Eastland stated that he had been a member of the SCLC since its formation in 1957 and that he had been active in its efforts to bring about racial equality. He stated that he had been arrested several times for his participation in the movement and that he had been subjected to various forms of harassment and discrimination. He also stated that he had been a member of the SCLC's "Poor People's Campaign" and that he had been active in its efforts to bring about economic justice for the poor. Senator Eastland concluded his testimony by stating that he believed that the SCLC and its leader, Dr. King, were doing a great deal of good for the country and that he hoped that the Subcommittee would take appropriate action to support their efforts.
